"Communicating Your Way through Constant Change"

Background/Intent: The idea is that change is constant and how individuals see, express, define themselves and handle the constant changes (communication) plays a big role in their success.

By

Carl Stokes

Carl Stokes is a highly skilled practitioner with the unique ability to help leaders gain clarity by helping them understand the connection between their functioning as leaders and the success of their organizations. With an M.A. in Leadership and Organizational Development from Saybrook University, Carl is able to provide successful interventions in a manner that allows him to distinguish between his own narratives brought to the experience from those of his clients. There is a signature sound or expression that emits from every individual which represents their unique authentic contribution to the world and it is Carl's mission is to help people see past the outward presentation of individuals that they encounter in order to hear and benefit from their sound.
