"An Introduction to Value Based Care"

By

Evan Richards

In my current role, I collaborate with technology and services partners to find innovative solutions to some of healthcare's toughest problems.

Having experience with both the vendor and provider perspective of this industry, I bring a unique understanding of the business and clinical imperatives we face in today's challenging healthcare environment. I enjoy deriving value for providers from their IT investments by ensuring excellence in the product, service teams and partnerships. Solving complex challenges is my main motivation in bringing greater access and better care for the patient.

When I'm not focused on work, I am focused on running, spending time with my family (including the four legged members), and studying the culture, history and character of my city/metropolitan area.
